What is Shear Stress?

Shear stress is the friction created by accelerated blood between the blood and the inner lining of the blood vessels. FlowDyn generates shear stress which releases beneficial biochemicals into the blood.

What is FlowDyn™

FlowDyn is an athletic training recovery device engineered by ACI Medical, LLC. It beats the competition hands down in terms of increase in blood flow, creation of shear stress and the release of beneficial biochemicals created in the body as a result of shear stress.

FlowDyn technology is the result of 30 years of rigorous research, clinical studies and extensive use – initially helping patients suffering limb threatening conditions.

FlowDyn features exclusive patented technology with additional patents pending. Our technology is tested and proven to be of benefit to legs and feet in medical settings and is now in use helping athletes train harder and recover more quickly.

Features

The FlowDyn applies rapid, stimulating, mechanical pulses, mimicking a rigorous massage, to the muscles. It's as simple as flipping a switch, sitting back and relaxing.

Benefits

Use of the FlowDyn accelerates and manipulates blood flow, increasing blood flow up to 10x, to trick your body into thinking it's running. This triggers the release of proteins and growth factors to promote recovery.

Compare FlowDyn™

There is no other recovery device that can facilitate similar biochemical effects.
